

Mechanical Project Design Engineer, Cambridge, £45K - £60K

An exciting start up business is looking for a Mechanical Project Design Engineer based in Cambridge.

Working closely with the MD, you will have a back ground in energy or automotive with a strong understanding and experience of Thermo Dynamics.

You will possess a higher degree in Mechanical Engineering with Engineering theory or similar calibre.

If you looking to work with a company offering zero carbon solutions that is a leap in technology, I would be keen to hear from you.

This role requires you to have excellent CAD design skill's, be a self-starter that will make things happen; with excellent communication skills.

Key responsibilities include:

- Project manage ad-hoc complex work load
- Provide details drawings and specifications
- Revise/amend drawings where necessary
- Support the MD with new project tasks and amendments
- Test and validation

You will have a minimum of five year's expertise working within a similar role, looking for an opportunity that will make a major significant change to energy technology globally.